Choosing a Web Address

This feature is available only to Homestead Gold members or members who have purchased upgrades for both a domain name and e-mail account.

The first step in setting up your online presence is selecting a Web site address (domain name) for your site, or transferring over your existing domain name. Whether you already own a Web address or are registering one for the first time, Homestead will manage all setup details and pay all annual fees for as long as you are with our service.

To register or transfer your Web site address:

1. Log in to your Homestead account (the My Web Site page will appear after you enter).
2. Click Web Site Services.
3. Click the 'Register a Web site address' link.

Tips:

Picking the perfect domain name

- Match your group/club/business name.
- Choose an address that will be easy for people to remember.
- Check your address for typos.

Once you select a domain name, it is very difficult to change. Be sure to double check your spelling.

What to do when your first choice is not available

- Check to see if the other Web address endings are taken (ex: .org, .net, .com).
- Add a letter or word such as I-, the-, or e- to the beginning of your address (ex: TheMasonEagles.org).
- Add an ending such as -inc, -co, -online to the end (ex: SmithPhotography-Online).

Setting Up and Using E-mail

This feature is available only for Homestead Gold members, or members who have purchased the domain name and e-mail upgrades.

Homestead provides two e-mail accounts that match your domain name. Having your own personalized e-mail mailbox can help in advertising your site, and help prevent spamming that occurs with more common e-mail addresses.

To set up an e-mail account:

1. Once you have registered or transferred your domain name successfully, log in to your Homestead account.
2. On the My Web Site page, click Web Site Services in the menu bar.
3. Click the 'manage e-mail accounts' link.
4. Click the 'Set up the new mailbox' link.
5. Enter a name for this mailbox.

The e-mail address associated with this mailbox will look like this:

mailboxname@yourwebaddress.com (org/net)

6. If this mailbox will be assigned to a specific person, type in the person's first and last names.
7. If you wish to set up an auto-reply for this mailbox, check the 'Enable Auto Reply' checkbox, and type in your Auto Reply message. (You can add, edit, or delete an Auto Reply message at any time.)
8. Type in a password for your e-mail account and confirm by typing it again. (Be sure to write it down since you will need this to log in and check your e-mail.)
9. Click the 'Save' button.

Setting Up and Using E-mail

To Log in to Your E-mail Account:

Once you have set up your mailbox, there are two ways to log in to your Homestead e-mail account via a Web browser:

- Type <http://mail.yourwebaddress.com> and when prompted, enter your mailbox name and e-mail password.
- Type <http://www.homestead.com> and click the 'Check E-mail' link on the upper right of the screen. Then enter your e-mail address and password.

Planning

1: Plan Before You Create

Before you start building your Web site, it is a good idea to take a few moments and brainstorm or sketch out what you have in mind for your site. You don't have to be an artist, but a simple outline will help you decide what should be included on your site and how it should be organized. Look at other sites that are similar to what you want to create to get some ideas.

2: Define Your Goals

What would you like your site to accomplish? Are you trying to organize your club? Do you want to expand your current business to have an online presence? Whatever your reasons, you need to decide what your site will accomplish and tailor it towards your audience.

3: Determine What You Want on Your Site

Keep in mind that what you put on your site should help meet your goals. If you want to have interactive features and images, make sure they correspond with your site. If there are particular photos or a specific background you want to use, scan and save them to your computer so they are easily available when you start to build. If you do not have your own images, Homestead provides thousands of clipart and graphics from which to choose.

If you would like further tips on planning your Web site, check out the articles in our Resource Center. Click the Resource tab followed by 'articles' to view article categories.

Creating Your First Page

Once you have the software downloaded on your computer, you are ready to build your site. There are two ways you can get your site started:

- Dive right in and create a site using a blank page
- Use our interactive Site Starter to lend you a hand

No matter which method you choose to get started, you can completely customize every aspect of your site.

Starting with a blank page

If you have a clear idea of how you want to design your site, and want to start your pages from scratch, complete the following steps:

1. Launch SiteBuilder (the New Page dialog box will appear). Select the 'Blank page' option.
2. Start building. Skip to Editing Your First Page (page 9), to learn how to create and edit your blank page.

Editing Your First Page

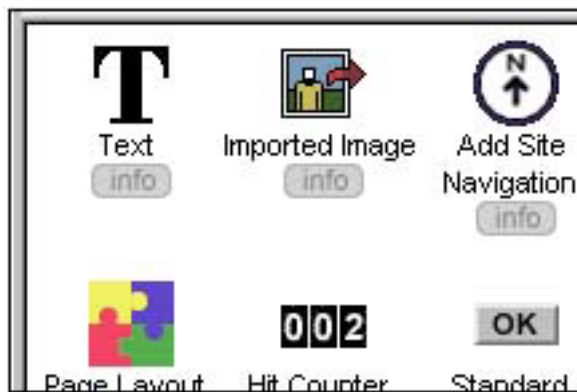

You build and edit your site using customizable, drag-and-drop page components called Elements. Just click to add text, image, Web polls, search functions and more! Publishing Your Page to the Internet

You must be connected to the Internet in order to publish your site. Click the 'Publish' icon in the toolbar of SiteBuilder. You can use the 'Pages' section of the Site Manager to keep track of which pages have been published already.

Promoting Your Site

Once your site is complete, you are ready for visitors. Here are some tips for bringing visitors to your site:

- One effective way to drive people to your site is to include your Web address into all advertising that you do. If you are a business or organization, you should include your address in your Yellow Page ad, brochures, mailings, business cards and any other documents you produce.
- If you are interested in advertising your site to a national and international audience, it is a good idea to use online methods such as search engines and Web directories. Visit the Promote My Site page under "Website Services" for more information on site promotion programs.

Check out our Resource Center for additional articles on promoting your site!

Site Design Tips

As you work on your pages, here are a few design tips to keep in mind for an effective Web site:

- Your home page should be informative and concise. Keep in mind this page should be relevant to both new and returning visitors.
- Be careful not to overload your pages with information. People generally prefer to see small chunks of information on individual pages with links that are useful to them.
- Graphics can be used to great effect, but they can be easily overused. Do not clutter your pages or fill them with slow loading images.
- Make your site easy to navigate. A list of links should appear in the same place on each of your pages. Be sure to include a link back to your home page.

Don't let information get out of date! Keep visitors coming back by updating frequently. You can use the Last Updated Element located in the 'Essentials' category to automatically place a date on your site of when it was last updated.
